Co-Chair of Children's Healthcare Canada's Connecting Care for Children with Medical Complexity Practice Network

Genevieve Currie RN, PhD is a family partner researcher and nurse researcher focused on the families' experience in caring for children with neurodevelopmental disorders (NDDs) and family engagement in health care and research. Genevieve is an Associate Professor of Nursing at Mount Royal University in Calgary, Alberta. She works with colleagues focusing on disability research, care coordination and family engagement across Canada. Genevieve's interest in engaging with families in research stemmed from her family experience of having two children with NDDs and dissatisfaction with the lack of involvement and perspectives of parents.
